

Often the problems of this world are so overwhelming that we feel too insignificant to think we can make a difference. Countless faith groups encourage us to join them, but sometimes we hesitate because we want something or someone we are connected to, identify with, and trust. Just as the number of television channels has increased exponentially, so have the number of ministry channels vying for our attention. Thankfully, over 100 years ago a channel was set up to energize and equip Friends who have a heart for schools, medical missions, training pastors, curriculum development, and more! Friends United Meeting is that channel.

From Presidential debates to the fall of the Berlin Wall, Princess Diana's wedding to Neil Armstrong's first steps on the moon, television has revealed to us a common history and taken us places we could never go on our own. But even before television began connecting people to the wider world, FUM was fostering those connections. FUM has been your channel since 1902. As you select television channels that provide wholesome entertainment and worthy news coverage, know that FUM is your channel for ministry!

“FUM is the original convergent movement.” — North Carolina YM Friend

Television is fresh on our minds these days because we’ve been forced to go “digital.” FUM, too, has had to adapt to the changing times, from the economic crisis to natural disasters striking our mission sites to learning what it means to be global partners. But in all of that we have stayed true to our mission, to be your channel for Good News.

“Last fall, Hurricane Ike slammed into Cuba’s northeast coast... Friends in Canada and the U.S. responded quickly with donations... But some of us wanted to do more—to be with Cuban Friends and to lend a hand with the rebuilding. An opportunity came with a work team organized by FUM.”

— Margaret Fraser, FWCC

“I will always remember Elton Trueblood’s submitting to Quaker Life a paper I wrote 40 years ago for his class on Quakerism. That was the encouragement I needed to keep on writing.”

— Great Plains YM Friend

In the same way that we remember the shock of the Challenger explosion and the pride of a nation at President Obama’s inauguration, FUM too has participated in and created sacred moments that will last a lifetime.

“FUM first went to Kenya in order to spread the Gospel. When they discovered the people couldn’t read, they established schools. When they discovered the people died young of disease, they established hospitals. Thank you FUM for caring about the whole person!”

— John Muhanji, Africa Ministries Representative

We believe FUM is doing the work God has called us to and invite you to tune in to that ministry by sharing from the gifts that God has entrusted to you.
